BEXLEY, Ohio - On a warm summer night 11 year old twins Emma and Reese Kasich kick a ball around the spacious yard of the governor's mansion in Bexley. It's a place they come to visit as first family but home a short drive away is where they're growing up.

"They live on their same street, their same friends, sleep in the same bedroom," said their mother First Lady Karen Kasich. "So really everything's pretty normal for them that way and that was the big reason that we decided to stay in our home."

And that she says has made the transition an easy one. "I'm a mom first so the past seven months haven't changed that much so that my focus is still Emma and Reese and their school and their sports and their care and well being."

"There definitely is more of a spotlight on what it is we do so the girls notice it, people are curious that it's been a long time since there have been young children in the governor's residence so they get asked questions a lot."
