KASICH DECLARES FEBRUARY 1 DIGITAL LEARNING DAY

COLUMBUS – Today Gov. John R. Kasich issued a proclamation declaring February 1, 2012 Digital Learning Day. Ohio is one of more than 35 states participating along with thousands of teachers and millions of students across the nation.

Digital Learning Day acknowledges the important and growing role of digital technologies to customize learning for students. Just as the Gutenberg press made access to books and the knowledge within them more accessible, digital technologies increase access to a world of growing content, opportunity and ideas.

The proclamation is an invitation to join the discussion about digital learning, and to explore and learn more about the potential for creating extraordinary learning experiences for our students.
